The scholarship is open to all law students who are members of a minority group (including any group traditionally underrepresented in the field of intellectual property law) and who meet the following criteria:

- Current enrollment in an American Bar Association-accredited law school in the U.S.;
- Commitment to the pursuit of a career in intellectual property law;
- Strong communication and writing skills; and
- Demonstrated leadership qualities and community involvement.

“The firm is thrilled to reward Kimberly’s commitment to making contributions to science and the law, and her desire to blend her experience in both of these fields by practicing in intellectual property law,” said Banner & Witcoff President Thomas K. Pratt. “We wish her continued success in law school and in her future career.”

Applications for the 2017 scholarship will be made available through the Banner & Witcoff website: www.bannerwitcoff.com.
