

Charles Miller discusses new Friendster patent in a CNET article.

August 1, 2006

Charles Miller provided comments for CNET's August 1 article "New lease on life for Friendster?" The article discusses a patent issued to Friendster in June 2006 that describes the use of online computer systems to see and manage user relationships. Friendster hopes that the patent will allow the company to gain ground on MySpace, the largest competitor among online social networking sites.

Please click here to view the article.

Posted: August 1, 2006