Darrell G. Mottley is named among the 12th annual 50 Most Important African-Americans in Technology

August 31, 2011

Darrell G. Mottley is named among the 12th annual 50 Most Important African-Americans in Technology by San Francisco publisher eAccess Corp.

The 50 Most Important African-Americans in Technology grew out of an exhibition at San Jose's The Tech Museum of Innovation in 1998. The list has been selected by eAccess Corp. since 1999 to raise the profile of African-American technical accomplishment, particularly for students. This year's selectees will be featured on a new instructional network called ReUnion.

Posted: August 31, 2011