Law360 Article Features Dismissal of Copyright Suit Against Banner Witcoff Client

Law360 covered a recent ruling from the federal district court in Washington, D.C., dismissing a complaint in which a former employee of one of Banner Witcoff's clients sought $63 million for the alleged infringement of copyrighted software.

As reported in the June 4 article, the court dismissed Neil Zaccari's complaint against Apprio, Inc. after finding that "the suit doesn't adequately allege wrongdoing by the defendant." Banner Witcoff attorneys John Hutchins and Christopher Roth represented Apprio in the matter.

Subscribers can view the article, "Gov't Contractor Beats $63M Suit Over Alleged Software Lift," online.

Posted: June 5, 2019