Patent Eligibility Bulletin: Steps To Consider As USPTO Shifts

Banner Witcoff's Reilley Keane and Kirk Sigmon recently authored an article for Law360 analyzing emerging considerations in patent eligibility as the United States Patent and Trademark Office continues to refine its approach to subject matter eligibility.

In the article, the authors discuss practical steps companies and practitioners should consider as patent eligibility guidance evolves, offering insight into how recent developments may affect patent prosecution strategies and innovation protection.

The piece is part of an ongoing series examining the rapidly changing landscape of subject matter eligibility and its implications for patent applicants navigating USPTO policy shifts.

The full article, "Patent Eligibility Bulletin: Steps To Consider As USPTO Shifts," is available here.

Posted: March 12, 2026