Richard S. Stockton discusses lawsuit over student athletes' names, likenesses in Intellectual Property Magazine

November 5, 2013

Mr. Stockton evaluates and provides perspective on In re NCAA Student-Athlete Name & Likeness Licensing Litigation, a case filed by student athlete plaintiffs against Electronic Arts Inc., the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Collegiate Licensing Company, in the November 2013 issue of Intellectual Property Magazine.

Please click here to view the article, titled "Quarterback takes on college athletics and video game manufacturer." Subscription is required.

Posted: November 5, 2013